Since the incident took place near a bus stop, a huge crowd gathered around the lady. A few people called out a passing auto and took her to Care for You hospital nearby. Luckily, I have the skill of remembering the registration number of any vehicle even if I see it only once. As he sped past, I happened to glance at the rear number plate. The car had a fancy registration number, which made it all the easy to remember. I walked to the phone booth close by and rang up the nearest police station. Luckily for me, the Inspector attended the call in person. I gave him all the details and told him whom I was. I decided I would not go to school and rushed to the hospital to check on the old lady. When I enquired at the reception, I was told she was in the ICU and needed blood. Her son had been informed and he was on his way. I left the place only after her son had arrived. Meanwhile, the Inspector had passed on the details to all nearby police stations and all passing vehicles were checked thoroughly. The police finally managed to nab him at a traffic signal.
